

Release notes for February 2026

Journals Datasets

Release date: February 27, 2026

We're pleased to introduce five new journal collections, expanding access to society-published research, and French and Spanish collections. These additions help you build a more complete and globally representative research portfolio.

What's new:

Premium Society Collection – 88 journals

Elsevier partners with numerous prestigious societies across a broad range of disciplines. This new Premium Society Collection brings together high-impact society journals that are not available in any other dataset. This collection includes influential, high-impact society journals not found elsewhere, providing authoritative research across medicine and the life sciences.

Masson Package – 56 journals

A strong collection of French-language medical and academic journals, including titles associated with leading national medical societies. This package is perfect for customers interested in French-language medical content.

Doyma Spanish CME Collection – 38 journals

High-quality Spanish-language journals covering medicine, health sciences, and clinical research, with content relevant to Spain and Latin America.

Doyma Spanish Medical Collection – 3 journals

A focused collection of reputable Spanish-language clinical and medical journals.

Health Supplementary Collection – 82 journals

Additional health and medical journals that expand coverage across healthcare practice and related fields.

If you'd like more details on any collection or support in selecting the right combination for your organization, please contact your Elsevier representative.
